

BOSTON'S NEW POLICE FORCE MAKES GOOD

Proves Respect for Law Stronger Than Anarchy, Says Coolidge.

CRIME CUT 20 PER CENT.

Cops Who Replaced Strikers a Two Fisted, Upstanding, Trim Set of Men.

By a Staff Correspondent of THE SUN.
BOSTON, Dec. 8.—(There are occasions when the Governor of Massachusetts, sitting at his desk, looks across the big, dark, paneled door at the State House, and thinks of the public welfare against private interest. And what do you think of Boston's new police force?)

It was easy to answer comment and question because Gov. Coolidge's visitor from THE SUN had been going around the celebrated center of beans and brains the entire afternoon much interested in the appearance and demeanor of the new force, observing them on patrol, watching how they handled traffic in the narrow, twisting streets, noting their manner toward men and women and especially toward the little people, and generally sizing them up. The truth is that Boston's new set of policemen are hummers, no more resembling the old crowd who broke their oaths on September 9, defied all authority and let loose a reign of terror, than the 1920 brand of New York gadabouts who, in the heyday of their power, were the terror of the city.

The lads who have taken the place of the mutineers whom Calvin Coolidge barred are a sturdy lot, take them by the collar and lead them to the 1200 sign, trimly built young fellows just out of the United States army for the most part; obviously of unusual intelligence and bringing to their new task that same swift readiness to tackle their weight in devil or wildcat that winged their courage when they broke the German front.

Hub Proud of Force.

Boston is in luck—no doubt of it. The city's gain has been tremendous. Every fact proves it, the statistics of crime, the satisfaction of merchants and householders, the confidence of judges upon the bench and, finest of all, perhaps the most significant of all, the attitude of the children.

The new police force, upward of 1,200 freshly recruited men, that was on the job to-day without the customary chattering of State infantrymen and machine gunners, is composed of the kind of young men that readers of THE SUN have grown accustomed to see, first, when they paraded in Fifth avenue and later, out of uniform, when they dropped back into the routine of civil life with the new set of shoulders, the new vigor and the new alertness that the United States Army had given them. Ninety per cent of the force are veterans of the A. E. F., the typical strapping, clear-eyed youth that make up the American Legion and that stand guard all over the country against Red revolution. The other 10 per cent is composed of young men from the farms of Massachusetts and from the towns of the coast where they will breed good Americans.

There were two of these on duty near the Oliver Wendell Holmes School in School street this afternoon when that big reservoir of trouble, let out and hidden simply boiled in the roadway. It was interesting to see the way the young cops handled the situation. The method is familiar enough in New York, thanks to the new relation of New York children and New York policemen, a relation of sympathy and understanding and trust, but apparently, or so one is told, it was not familiar in Boston. But these new policemen simply stropped everything, motor cars, trucks and even a mail wagon until the children had cleared the street and were out of possible danger. One of them, a slim six footer, hard as nut, made a dozen trips across the roadway guiding timorous girls. And it was good to see the children's faces and hear their "Good night, Mister Policeman." That's a nice thing for any man's town.

Nothing Feazes 'Em.

As the dusk brought a flurry of snow and motor cars raved and rumped at Tremont and Boylston streets a new traffic man was getting his first tryout and it was a hard one. Boston streets still preserve the pattern of John Adams' day and congestion here is worse in spots than anywhere else in New York. The corner was simply a twisting jam. But nothing feazed the new cop. Standing in the center of the intersection, his military overcoat strapped trimly about his waist and a big forty-five service Colt swinging in his black holster from his belt, he tackled his traffic job with delightful insouciance as he whirled this way and that, motioning the impatient pedestrians with a backhanded warning and covering ing the whole boiling with his flashing glasses.

A truck driver, a big lot of a fellow, came swinging down Tremont street and tried to go against traffic, disregarding a plain signal. The ex-soldier who happened to be on that particular job made a cat's leap forward, sprang upon a wheel, yanked Mr. Truckman to the sidewalk and stuck his own jaw within six inches of the red, beautiful face and spoke in the following simple Anglo-Saxon:

"Get me, you. I'll warn you once. But if you ever try that again on my corner I'll tear you loose from your pockets. Git!"

And the offender, swallowing the curses that must have choked him, got exceedingly prompt. Whereupon the traffic man leaped back to his job and alertly returned to the business at hand.

Crime Decreases.

Gov. Coolidge this evening confirmed a statement made by Secretary Devlin of the Police Commissioner's office that the police court judges have noted a new intelligence displayed by policemen in presenting evidence. The new policemen get their facts straighter. They are more respectful to the robe. They don't show and apparently don't get into the line of the resentment that the old time policemen used to feel over having to come to court, resentment sometimes taken out upon the prisoner. The business men have written innumerable letters to the Governor commending the efficiency and dependability of the new force.

The latest statistics of arrests reveal that crime in Boston has fallen off about 20 per cent. There are fewer burglaries, fewer hold ups, fewer assaults, less sneak thievery and so on, and while prohibition may have something to do with this new morality, nevertheless there is a general disposition to give Coolidge's cops the greater share.

The bad elements in Boston thoroughly comprehend that the young policeman of the present is not the boy to turn the other cheek. He is a scrapper, packing a wallop in either fist and has seen nothing as yet that can chill his feet or send the goose flesh creeping up his back. The gangs have tried him out and know what he is made of. As the Governor said there was scarcely a threat or mean action that the striking policemen and their union allies did not employ to frighten the police recruits—all without other result than to demonstrate the new cops couldn't be frightened.

Remarkable Discipline.

Until recently the new force had the backing of Gen. Sam Parker's guardsmen and this was continued until they got the feel of their job, but the last of the State troops were withdrawn today, and to-day, for the first time, the new force ruled the roost with the whole city looking on in pride.

Many of them haven't even got uniforms as yet, though the lack of a standardized coat doesn't seem to bother them much.

"At first," said Gov. Coolidge, "we couldn't find a firm willing to make uniforms for us. The uniform manufacturers said they did not dare do anything which might seem to be against a striking union; that would be their own ruin to do so. But we found a way, nevertheless, and we are rapidly uniforming the new force. The agents of the strikers have done their best to penetrate the secret, but it is too well kept. They don't know where the uniforms are coming from, but they are coming right along."

One thing that strikes the observer is the remarkable discipline and order and way of these men after and away from the line. There was not time, little training. There was not time, but they were put through the regular course of sparring, boxing, wrestling and more or less of the training in police work. As the green hands come up in batches they are taken over by one of the best police officers there is in the country. Captain Kinsley has been giving lectures in between, for just two weeks. Then they are handed their shields and turned out to sink or swim. Special schools are in operation for the completion of the training in police work strictly. Boston will need possibly 1,500 men before her police quota is filled up.

Coolidge Points the Moral.

Of the old force, 408 men are left, 498 out of 1,574. These were staunch old boys who could not be shaken from their duty and they had a tough time of it. Most of them, it appears, have been taken off the streets and placed on indoor duty.

Gov. Coolidge talked this evening with his visitor from THE SUN, speaking very modestly of his own part in the triumph of overcoming anarchy, but glowing with pride in his city and State. The moral he drew from it all was put in the first line of this story.

"It's a fine thing," he said, "Boston is already proud of it, feels safe in its charge. The fact that it is here and very much on the job proves that the respect for law and order in America is stronger than every influence or threat anarchy can bring to bear. In the first days of the strike, when it became known that I would not surrender, would not permit a single striker to return to his job, powerful agents of unions made this threat to all of the authorities concerned: 'We will destroy you. You don't know our power.' Well, we are still a going concern."

"It's time to quit this pussy footing and cheek turning. Men in authority have got to stand up for democracy. It's time to quit being so gloomy and dismal. The country is all right and is coming around nicely. My prescription is: Mix firmness with cheerfulness and serve hot."

Vatican Work to Aid Unemployed.

Rome, Dec. 8.—To provide work for the unemployed, the Vatican will construct a huge boarding house for visiting pilgrims, besides other buildings.

do you know that your Payroll is correctly made up?

WHAT are you going to do if an employee claims his pay is wrong? Even if the cash balanced how do you know someone else was not overpaid the same amount? You can have proof if you use the International Payroll Machine. This machine lists, adds and tells the exact amount of each denomination required to make up the payroll. It counts the money into envelopes and keeps a permanent black-and-white record of the amount put into each envelope. It checks the payroll and balances the cash automatically. It is handling the payrolls of such firms as General Electric, Standard Oil, John B. Stetson, United States Steel Corporation and hundreds of others. Send for a full list of users.
